

A statement is any sentence that is either true T or false F, but not both. Statements are often represented using a letter such as p or q. If a statement is represented by p, then not p is the negation of the statement. A conjunction is true only when both statements that form it are true.