

The significance of the core values of an organization as a basis for creating a rewarding work environment was identified by the research conducted by John Purcell and his colleagues at Bath University. The most successful companies had what the researchers called 'the big idea'. They had a clear vision and a set of integrated values, which were embedded, enduring, collective, measured and managed.