

A photoresistor or light dependent resistor is an electronic component that is sensitive to light. It is not uncommon for the values of resistance of an LDR or photoresistor to be several megohms in darkness and then to fall to a few hundred ohms in bright light. When light falls upon it, then the resistance changes.