

Because plastic pollution extends to the seas and oceans, this leads to killing marine life, in addition to eating small fish for some fragments and fibers of chemical constituents of plastic, and then eating large fish for them, and causing them great harm, whether in terms of reducing their desire for food, or affecting the digestive system It leads to hunger and killing it, in addition to all this, when a person consumes fish filled with plastic and microscopic plastics that damage him, and he suffers from diseases