

Light of wavelength comparable to or larger than the width of a slit spreads out in all forward directions upon passing through the slit. This indicates that light spreads beyond the narrow path defined by the slit into regions that would be in shadow if light traveled in straight lines. Each portion of the slit acts as a source of light waves.