

DNA is the most important molecule in cells, holding information for life and propagation. RNA assists in cell maintenance via genes.