

Plastic pollution is a pressing environmental issue that requires immediate action. Encouraging the use of biodegradable or compostable materials and supporting clean-up initiatives can also contribute to reducing plastic pollution. Collaborative efforts involving governments, businesses, communities, and individuals are necessary to address plastic pollution effectively.