

The concept of statistics is a collection of scientific methods concerned with collecting, classifying, interpreting, evaluating, tabulating, and summarizing data. Inferential statistics is the analysis and interpretation of inferences, drawing conclusions based on a small sample from the study population, in order to make decisions about the entire population.