

In my opinion, while external influences affect a child's development, parents undoubtedly play the most important role because of their early and ongoing involvement in their child's life, as well as the values and guidance they provide. The main reason why I believe that parents have the most important influence on a child's development is that they are the first and most consistent people in a child's life. Continuous.