

Steam Distillation: Steam distillation is employed when the components to be separated are volatile and have high boiling points or when the substances are immiscible with water.