Product Audits Product audits are generally conducted from the customer's perspective.ISO 9000:2000 divides products into four generic categories: hardware, software, processed materials, and services.Traditionally, product quality audits were conducted primarily to determine conformance with design.However, modern quality