

1- OSHA is abbreviation for Occupational Safety and Health Administration It's the largest organization in the world that specializes in setting occupational safety and health standards for workers in all fields. It aims to maintain a safe and healthy work environment and increase the effectiveness of human resources to raise the level of quality, train employers to determine their responsibilities and raise their awareness regarding occupational health and safety.