

The amphitheater seated some 50,000 spectators, who were shielded from the sun by a massive retractable velarium (awning). The Colosseum was the scene of thousands of hand-to-hand combats between gladiators, of contests between men and animals, and of many larger combats, including mock naval engagements.