

secondarily, carbohydrates naturally or by processing form micro particulates that resemble fat globules and emulsion droplets thus mimicking fats. Starch-based fat replacers can be derived from common corn, high amylose corn, waxy maize, wheat, taro, potato and rice or plant organs such as the roots, leaves, tubers and seeds