

Blood vessels around the wound narrow. Platelets, which are the clotting cells in blood, clump together to make a "plug" in the wound. Clotting or coagulation includes a protein called fibrin. It's "blood glue" that makes a net to hold the platelet plug in place. This helps to stop the bleeding. It might feel a bit warm too. Don't worry.