

Software faults become software failures only when they are "activated", that is, when a user tries to apply the specific software section that is faulty.