

This suburban city home is defined by its indoor/ outdoor living areas and large entertainment space. The villa is designed with two sets of parallel masses with the connecting volume running east–west perpendicularly to create this large courtyard. Contemporary aesthetics informed the building design with sculptured rectangular forms, a large expanse of glazing, and wide sliding fenestration, creating the desired visuals. Designed as a weekend home for a family, the residence is configured as a 'C' typology with a large central courtyard facing the linear lawn towards the north.
