

Off-gridders create very little waste by living a lifestyle that emphasizes self-sufficiency and sustainability. They often grow their own organic fruits and vegetables and raise animals like chickens and goats for eggs and milk. By avoiding the consumption of packaged foods, they significantly reduce their paper and plastic waste. Additionally, many off-gridders do not rely on garbage service, which encourages them to minimize waste in their daily lives.