

Two different tests are used to screen for hearing loss in babies. o Otoacoustic emissions (OAE) tests whether some parts of the ear respond to sound. During this test, a soft earphone is inserted into your baby's ear canal. Your baby can rest or sleep during both tests.