

This course is based on the guide for business data analytics, created by the International Institute of Business Analysis (liba). It does not teach how to become a data scientist, but rather focuses on the scope of applicability of data analysis techniques to select the best technique for a specific business context. The course is designed for line managers of analytics teams, project managers with analytics components to their projects, and business analysts involved in analytics initiatives.