

consists of two primary surfaces in a sedimentary rock, separating beds with different composition, texture, color, cement .It can also observed in the exposed rock units by differential weathering and erosion.