

Trees are perennial plants characterized by an elongated stem or trunk, supporting branches and leaves. Trees also help prevent soil erosion, regulate water cycles, and contribute to climate regulation by absorbing carbon dioxide.