

Light visible to the human eye can be defined as electromagnetic radiation with wavelength between 400 and 780 nm (Threlfall, 1993). The UV-visible spectral region (200–780) is normally expressed in terms of nanometers (nm) or angstroms (Å)?