

Anti-discrimination laws are legal frameworks designed to prevent unfair treatment based on characteristics such as race, gender, religion, age, disability, or sexual orientation.