

In conclusion, the rise of populism and right-wing nationalism poses significant challenges to the rules-based international order, threatening global stability, security, and prosperity.