

Most photosynthetic autotrophs are plants, which use solar energy to create a significant amount of biomass in the environment. These secondary metabolites include polyphenolic compounds, flavonoids, terpenes, terpenoids, carbohydrates, organic acids, lignins, saponins, enzymes, etc.