

Abstract. Affordable sustainable housing projects made from locally available construction materials are in high demand. Building construction using sustainable materials will lead to reduction in the pollution and also improve the existing situation of environmental problems. The primary goal of this research is to do a comparative review to determine the viability of using recycled building materials instead of conventional building material. Due to huge urbanization activities lot of environmental issues are originating.