

Middle childhood, ages 6 to 12, is an essential period for children to develop social, emotional, and physical skills and form confidence in multiple areas such as interrelationships and schoolwork. These school-aged children are experiencing significant physiological and mental challenges as their body grows quickly and the living context gets more complicated.