

Citizenship between rights and duties The relationship between rights and duties between the state and the citizen is subject to three traditions or theories of the liberal traditions academy. Individuals such as civil, political, cultural and social rights of individuals. 2) Community traditions Emphasize the principle or concept of societal citizenship that has been affirmed through its hegemony and group dominance over members of society. This community is bound by a set of shared values that define the nature of the relationship between the citizen and society. Outperforms individual rights. 3) The Civil (Republican) Tradition: This theory focuses on both the individual and his rights and on collective responsibility at the same time in order to achieve the public interest and build a good society.