

In 1899 Farbenfabriken vormals Friedrich Bayer & Co. (later Bayer AG) introduced aspirin, a pain-reliever that would come to rank high among the world's most commonly used drugs. The company credits the synthesis of pure acetylsalicylic acid, aspirin's active ingredient, to Bayer chemist Felix Hoffmann.