

When the English praise a poet, they praise him for those aspects of his work which are "individual" and "original".