

The second phase of the Blue Line may be launched in Qatar. Due to the country's small size, there are only a few active international airports in the country, such as the Hamad International Airport. This means that domestic flights are not feasible in the country. Also, with a coastline of only 563 kilometers, it is easier to travel by car or bus.