

Unequal distribution can be described as an unfair situation in the economy, whereby certain people are given more privileges and powers than others to do.] defemiticon. A more equal distribution of resources may be good for development and poverty reduction. The government can implement instruments from devgressive taxation, cash transfers, and investment in hun dayaletadion and lusive growth strategies. The consequencer of this is lower satisfaction on the wider population, causing increased cases of poverty.