

People who undergo this type of genetic testing are usually from a family in which many members have had a particular person's inherited disease. This is used to predict an adult's risk of what analyzes developing certain diseases later in life, like certain cancers or Alzheimer's disease.