

In their experiment, participants completed a food history inventory (FHI) that asked them about their experiences with various foods when they were younger. A week later, participants returned to the laboratory and were given false feedback.