In a series of publications on gliomas, Hans–Joachim Scherer (1906–1945), a young German neuropathologist working in exile at the Institut Bunge (Antwerp, Belgium) was decades ahead of his contemporaries in his insight into the pathology and biology of brain tumors (2).The distinction between primary and secondary glioblastomas was a remarkable observation at that time.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com