

The world is looking for renewable energy sources to reduce the pollution caused by carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>) emissions and toxic gases. Recovering part of the wasted heat from diesel engines would not just bring great advantages for reducing fuel consumption, but also increase total output power as well as reducing CO<sub>2</sub> and other harmful emissions. The most prominent sources of renewable energy are solar energy, wind energy, and wasted energy.