

The Impact of Smartphones on Modern Life Life before smartphones was very different. Advances in technology, like smaller computer chips and better batteries, made smartphones possible. They read newspapers for news, watched TV for entertainment, and used maps to find their way. Communication was slower, and getting information was not as easy as it is now. Smartphones were created to make communication and information access faster and more convenient. Overall, smartphones have made life easier and more connected for most people.