

Some people may find contact lenses comfortable and barely noticeable once they're accustomed to wearing them, while others may experience discomfort or irritation.