

While we were excited to experience the tapestry of American culture, we were also aware of potential challenges related to our religious dietary restrictions. We understood that certain situations might require careful navigation to ensure we could adhere to our beliefs.