

Momentum and speed have a direct link, and mass and momentum also have a direct relationship. The law stipulates that momentum is conserved, which means that the starting and final moments are equal, as we have already discussed.