Microflorapresent in soil (especially, in rhizosphere) proved their potential in the control of soil-borne diseasesby the process of biocontrol and microbes employedin this technique are referred as bioagents (Cook etal., 1978) or biocontrol agents.