

Caitlin Clark's draft night regret: The reason she felt upset for Kate Martin. Joined by former teammates Martin and Gabbie Marshall, Clark admitted that while she was thrilled to be drafted first, she felt a profound disappointment at missing Martin's moment. "After my name was called, I got swept off to do interviews. I didn't even have my phone, and suddenly I heard, 'Kate just got picked.' It hit me so hard—I wasn't there to see it," she revealed. Martin, dubbed "The Glue" on Iowa's roster for her steady play and fierce loyalty, had no expectations of being drafted. The 2024 WNBA Draft was a milestone for Caitlin Clark—a defining moment that punctuated her incredible journey from Iowa standout to the professional stage. What could possibly dampen the excitement of draft night for the woman who just made history?. During a recent episode of Fresh Tawk with Jada Gyamfi, Clark shared the backstory that only her inner circle knew. In fact, she had attended simply to support Clark.
