

Award of damages – this is the principal remedy in any case involving negligence tort in which the damage caused to the claimant must be of a type that is reasonably foreseeable (a reasonable man would have foreseen the type of injury, loss or damage).