

In 1717, New France's governor granted the lands surrounding the cemetery and the pines of Saint Sulpice's Society of Priests, a Roman Catholic order founded in Paris. Although the Sulpician Seminary was to hold the land in trust for them, the seminar expanded this agreement to grant itself the sole right of ownership.