

But for countries in the developing world, the same integration with the global economy has eliminated industrialization and underdevelopment.