On the day of the celebration, crowds of celebrants go to the cemeteries to celebrate, sing, and make offerings, which are the favorite foods of the deceased as well as their favorite drink. After completing the visit, the celebrants eat the food they offered as offerings because they believe that the souls of the dead have devoured the spiritual value of the food, and what remains is food that has lost its nutritional value.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com