

The MOVEit breach affected 100,000 present and past employees who lost their data, and the data theft affected more than 62 million people and government, public, and commercial organizations around the world, including the New York City public school system, and the New York City-based human resources and payroll solutions company. MOVEit app lost its reputation and many users after the incident.