

The performance of the Zardiya was tested in three separate stages to evaluate its efficiency and identify area for improvement. Second Test: After adjusting the joint points and reinforcing the connecting areas, the efficiency improved to 70%, with noticeable enhancement in flexibility and control. First Test: The efficiency was approximately 50% We observed difficulty in joint movement and a weak grip strength.