

The effect of hormones on tumorigenesis and tumor progression, particularly the function of the estrogen signal pathway in breast cancer, has been widely discussed. FSH and LH belong to a family of glycoprotein hormones, which also include placental hCG and thyroid-stimulating hormone (TSH). However, numerous leucine-rich GPCRs (LGRs) have been identified in the human genome (28).